The Week in Wall Street were a broadening security market, easier tendency in money rates and continued imports of gold from Europe. All of these factors were indications of more favorable business conditions and of a more confident feeling over the political and financial situation. The bank statement for last week and for the preceding week showed the influence of a lighter interior currency movement and the effect of gold imports on bank deposits. Although the increase in deposits was not heavy it reflected a change in the local money movement, which already has resulted in more mercantile loans and a greater disposition on the part of the banks and other money institutions to come into the time loan and commercial paper branches of the money market. The market for money is in a far better condition than it was several weeks ago, but as yet it does not tend toward extreme ease, and from present conditions it does not appear likely that it will: in fact, bankers do not look for or care for the low rates prevailing the greater part of last year. A money market in which borrowers can get accommodation, and which offers some inducement to lenders, is a fair summary of the present condition. The stringency in commercial loans has been relaxed, the cash holdings of the banks have been increased, and the Treasury's net gold balance has been raised about $25,000.000. These encouraging conditions have been brought about by gold imports, and with the beneficial influence of the movement of gold this way is a growing confidence in a glorious soundmoney victory, already foreshadowed by the vicinity and make a gain, and, though small, it indicates a season of great prosperity before the year has reached its end.

For the first time in many weeks the security market developed a movement of prices toward a higher level, based upon a renewal of outside in-level. THE WEEK IN WALL STREET.

For the first time in many weeks the security market developed a movement of prices toward a ligher level, based upon a renewal of outside interest, and upon the more promising conditions in the money market, and in the political outlook. Throughout the week values advanced, and the inquiry from sources other than speculative was such as to foreshadow a revival of interest among investors and an awakening among the followers of the market to the opportunities for legitimate profit in securing stocks at their present level. A factor contributing to the advance in stocks was the increase in the price of wheat, and in this advance may be found an effective answer to the free-sliver quacks who have been using as their chief argument the low price of wheat as a result of the low price of silver and an alleged appreciation in the price of gold.

st the low price of silver and an alleged appreciation in the price of gold.

Mr. Bryan's ideas are totally at variance with sound economic principles, and though he occasionally mumbles something about supply and demand, he really knows little about the conditions which govern prices, and he knows as little about the conditions which govern the movement of money, for he says that gold comes this way merely because he was nominated for the Prendency. This is about as good a reason as was recently given in a silver-mine owner's weekly market letter, in which it was stated that gold came ket letter, in which it was stated that gold came this way because we wanted it, and because Euphope wanted to get rid of it, and who in a subsequent letter explained that the gold received here had not found its way into the channels of trade, but had been locked up in the Treasury, the bankers holding as security for it in their vaults
